4th Grade Chromebook Pilot Reflection

This year, 4th grade has been piloting the use of Chromebooks. I want to note that I am sharing my personal experience and observations, and not speaking on behalf of other grade levels or their specific needs.

Overall Impressions:

The Chromebooks have been reliable and have met our functional needs well. I primarily use them for NWEA testing and web-based activities, and they've performed consistently in those areas.

Support and Repairs:

When issues have come up, the repair process has been quick and efficient, with no cost passed on to families, which is a huge plus.

Device Quality:

As expected given the price point, the build quality doesn't match that of a MacBook. The main frustration has been with the trackpad, which isn't as responsive or intuitive as I might hope. That said, considering my students are 10 years old, a premium device may not be necessary at this stage.

Looking Ahead:

My thoughts moving forward center around the longevity of these devices, especially with frequent use, and what the cost implications will be over time—both for maintaining the current fleet and for the eventual roll down or replacement of older devices.
